EVANSVILLE MEETS JANSVILLE SATURDAY

High Schoolers Finish Up Practice With Stiff Drill—Many Outside Fans Expected to Witness Game

The last practice before the first game of the season was held by the high school football team today. The result of Saturday's game will be watched with interest by football fans, anxious to see Jansville's football team, the best in years. The squad has gone through a most strenuous week's work and should be in the peak of condition for tomorrow's game. Inside the regular after school practice at the fourth ward park, the team has had much inside blackboard work and signal practice during the week. The members of the team has not yet been announced, but it is a certainty that a large number of the candidates will get a chance to prove their worth. The Evansville team will arrive on the morning train, so that the game may be started promptly in the afternoon. Along with the Jansville players, many outside students plan to see the game. An Evansville high school has no game scheduled for tomorrow, it is expected a number of Jansville students will travel up to witness the contest. About twenty odd boys have been busy at the fair grounds the past two days preparing the field. The goals have been put up and the field lined out, making everything in the best of shape when the referee's whistle is blown.

MORRIS MILLER

Frank Baker, mighty hitter that he is, ought to be a greater slugger, according to Miller Higgins. Higgins is recognized as one of the brightest men in baseball. His ability to find fault in every branch of the game and to size up any player who comes within his vision, is known throughout the country. The astonishing statement about the home-run star are worth printing. Higgins says that Baker could hit 400 of his would-be hitting fault. There probably aren't half a dozen fans in the country who ever had the slightest idea that there was any fault to be found in Baker's hitting. Higgins says that Baker's weakness is in seeing the first ball pitched. Baker loves to hit. He can't stand idly by and see the ball sail past him. Veteran pitchers, at least, are aware of this and usually try to make the first ball, one that he cannot hit to advantage. Higgins points out that when Baker goes batting around 400 last season for a few weeks he was taking more time—he was waiting for the good ones.

Fight fans are still discussing the feat of Jack Dempsey in laying Fred Fulton full length on the ring floor in thirty-three seconds. A number of fans have written in since, all with the same question. That is: "Was it the quickest knockout on record for heavyweights?" Yes, it was. But here are some other remarkable short fights. Old Peter Maher, over twenty years ago, knocked out Steve O'Donnell at Masspeth in forty seconds. Tom Shuckley laid out Gus Kuhn in a minute of furious fighting at Coney Island ten years ago. Frank Kline lost the lightweight title to Joe Gans on the first punch (thrust delivered at Port Erie in 1902). Bob Fitzsimmons dropped Peter Maher in a minute at Langtry, Tex., in 1896. Battling Nelson set the record for all classes when he knocked Billy Rossier in two seconds about 16 years ago. But Hawkins stopped Martin Flaherty in four seconds in a preliminary to the Fitzsimmons-Corbett fight at Coney Island in 1907. Terry McGovern dropped Reddy Palmer over the floor in less than one round at Tuckahoe in 1899.

Last July at Kelly Field, Texas, Corporal Bessolo, a member of the 81st Aero Squadron, established a world's record when he caught a baseball dropped from an airplane flying 200 feet above the ground. Since then several attempts have been made by aviators in camps here and abroad to equal or break Bessolo's record, but all attempts have failed.

Recently in France several American fliers tried to smash the Texas record. On the athletic grounds close to where the Americans are quartered a 150 foot white circle was marked, and a number of fliers, one by one, stood within the white lines. A few moments later a small plane, piloted by Lieut. Coleman, came into view, flying low over the field. The machine rose to a height of 750 feet and then turned so that it was directly above the circle, and then the pilot received a prearranged signal to drop the white baseball. After Coleman released his grip on the first ball it could plainly be seen splashing in the sun on its downward flight.

As soon as it was dropped the men in the crowd, faces skyward, moved about rapidly, first trotting, then walking in order to judge the ball as it came down. A high foul. But the white object came down too swiftly and fell inside the circle. While the aviator again flew over the circle at the same height and dropped a second and third ball, and the result was not different from the first. While the second ball dropped from the plane on its way to the earth a high wind suddenly blew and the white object was carried out of the reach of those in the circle.

Three large containers were sewed, but no shipments being made at the time, they were sold privately and the money turned over to the Red Cross. DISQUALIFIED MEN GIVEN INSTRUCTIONS

Madison, Wis., Sept. 27.—Instructions for registrants declined in the draft because of physical disability are given in a circular prepared by the U. S. Public Health Service with the approval of Provost Marshal General Crowder. The circular, which has been placed in all the local draft boards throughout the country, is the result of a recommendation made to General Crowder by Surgeon General Rupert Blue of the health service. The surgeon general points out that in the first draft about one-third of the men examined were rejected for physical disabilities and that hundreds of thousands will be added as a result of the examination to be made of the new registrants.

It is highly desirable," said Surgeon General Blue, "that the men found to be disqualified for military service by the examining physicians of the local draft boards should receive definite instructions as to the meaning of these disabilities as far as possible. But the object of this measure is not only to reclaim men for military service or for such service as they can perform, but to lessen the burden of illness and disability among those engaged in essential work. It is hoped that the instruction in this circular, which is really a primer of the physical defects of the nation, will reach far beyond the draft board and be utilized by all agencies interested in improving the public health to instruct

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Again the Government comes to the people of the country with the request that they lend their money, and lend it upon a more liberal scale than ever before, in order that the great war for the rights of America and the liberation of the world may be prosecuted with ever increasing vigor to a victorious conclusion. And it makes the appeal with the greatest confidence because it knows that every day it is becoming clearer and clearer to thinking men throughout the nation that the winning of the war is an essential requirement. The money that is held back now will be of little use or value if the war is not won and the selfish masters of Germany are permitted to dictate what America may and may not do. Men in America, besides, have from the first until now dedicated both their lives and their fortunes to the vindication and maintenance of the great principles and objects for which our Government was set up. They will not fail now to show the world for what their wealth was intended.
